Criminal Charges Filed Against Lafazan

By Niall Fitzgerald

Another criminal complaint against Nassau Legislator Joshua Lafazan (D-Syosset) was filed this past Tuesday with the District Attorney and Board of Ethics. The Criminal Complaint detailed how a $100,000 loan given to Lafazan by a billionaire and longtime political donor was concealed by Lafazan, and constitutes an illegal campaign gift.

Lafazan took the $100K, claiming it was for a "graduate school degree" he was pursuing. The "loan" was solicited and taken by Lafazan from billionaire and longtime political donor Bryan "Hunt" Lawrence of Centre Island. But then Lafazan then put $160,000 into his 2022 congressional campaign.

The $100K constitutes "an illegal gift" under the Nassau County Charter, which limits "gifts" or "loans" to no more than a value of $75, according to the charges.

What is clear is that Lafazan took the money anyway - and then tried to hide it.

Lafazan filed a false financial disclosure in 2021, with the Board of Ethics that excluded the loan. Then, in 2022, Lafazan failed to file any disclosure until after being notified that a resident had requested access to the document.

"Lafazan broke the law when he accepted an illegal $100,000 gift - and then tried to hide it by lying on his financial disclosure," stated Paolo Pironi, the resident who filed the complaint. "He thinks we're all stupid. Lafazan must be held accountable for this criminal behavior."

Joshua Lafazan

A separate complaint was previously filed for alleged misconduct with the Federal Elections Commission by former Democrat candidate for Congress Robert Zimmerman. The complaint alleged that Lafazan used the loan as a "straw donation" to illegally filter other people's money into his campaign - in violation of federal contribution limits. Lafazan funneled $160,000 into his 2022 congressional campaign, claiming they were all his "personal funds."

"The FEC should investigate whether the initial loan was itself intended to influence and be funneled to the campaign or whether it was simply intended to free up other funds for the campaign," said the FEC Complaint.

Lafazan could be subject to several penalties, including more than $10,000 in fines, a class A misdemeanor, and additional action by the district attorney for submitting knowingly false information regarding his finances under oath.

"This unethical behavior by Lafazan is out of control," said Pironi. "We need a normal elected official to focus on protecting our quality of life, not a politician looking to play House of Cards."

George Santos Stole $3K from Disabled US Veteran, Let Dog Die

By Mitch Baxter

In a new low, now-Congressman George Santos stole $3,000 from a GoFundMe charity fundraising, earmarked to pay for emergency surgery for a disabled homeless US Navy Veteran's service dog. Because Santos stole the money, the dog died.

In 2016, disabled US Navy veteran Richard Osthoff went to the Friends of Pets Untied ("FOTU") - a "charity" run by Anthony Devolder a/k/a George Santos - to help him raise the funds to pay for emergency surgery for his service dog Sapphire. The dog had a stomach tumor, and needed immediate surgery to be saved.

After the GoFundMe raised the $3,000, Santos stole the money, and disappeared. The surgery was canceled for lack of funds and Sapphire died from the tumor.

Santos has operated under numerous pseudonyms - fake names - including Anthony DeVolder, Anthony Zabrovsky, and Kitara Rivache. He has engaged in what one of the leading newspapers in Brazil - where Santos is a dual citizen - described as "a two decade long petty crime wave."

Osthoff contacted The North Shore Leader and confirmed that he was a disabled, homeless veteran living in a tent in New Jersey off Route 9 with his service-dog Sapphire, who had developed a stomach tumor. A veterinary technician referred Osthoff to Santos who was then running the "charity" FOTU.

The "charity" was never registered with the IRS. Several witnesses have described how Santos used the charity as a front to simply scam and steal money from well-meaning donors on GoFundMe - and never deliver the funds to the needy cause.

Santos set up the GoFundMe for Osthoff and Sapphire, and quickly raised the $3,000 from people trying to help. Santos then made numerous excuses for not turning over the money, and then disappeared.

US Navy Veteran Richard Osthoff and Sapphire

Sapphire died within weeks, leaving a desperate Osthoff on the brink of suicide, begging in the street for money to cremate her.

Santos is now being widely denounced for this fraud, being labeled as 'George Scantos' and 'The Great Fatsby.' A majority of the members of the US House of Representatives have now supported expelling him from the House. Expulsion requires a 2/3 vote of the US House.

The North Shore Leader first exposed Santos as "a Fabulist - a Fake" and detailing his lies, several months before the election.

Leader publisher Grant Lally, appearing on MSNBC Saturday Morning with Cori Griffin, called Santos a "sociopath," and said of his stealing the money raised for a disabled American veteran's service dog, that "this is pure evil; no one can support him at this point."

Martin Luther King Program in Glen Cove

By Olivia Everett

After several years of Rev. Dr. King's events being via Zoom due to the pandemic, the 39th annual symbolic march and program returned again to the Wunsch Center at the Glen Cove Middle School. Sponsored by the MLK Birthday Commission, the Glen Cove School District and The City of Glen Cove, the march began at the First Baptist Church of Glen Cove.

The theme this year was Dr King's Legacy of Service, and people were asked to bring a nonperishable item to donate to NOSH, an organization that distributes food to those in need.

As always Sheryl Goodine opened the program with the Swahili greeting Harambe, which means working together. Rev. Roger Williams Pastor of the First Baptist Church of Glen Cove gave the invocation which was followed by the color guard presentation by the Glen Cove Police Department and the Glen Cove Volunteer Fire Department.

A young student Jeremiah Dominique led the Pledge of Allegiance, and later spoke on MLK Legacy of Service. The Glen Cove High School Select Choral directed by Ed Norris III, sang The Star-Spangled Banner and Lift Every Voice and Sing. Greetings were given by Glen Cove Mayor Pamela Panzenbeck and Glen Cove Superintendent of Schools Dr Maria Rianna.

Gaitley Stevenson-Mathews read a beautiful poem written by Glen Cove Poet Laureate Emeritus, Victoria Crosby, which was based on the theme Legacy of Service, which also paid tribute to the late Rev. Calvin Butts as well as to MLK. Gaitley later spoke about giving back to the community.

The drumline was back and as thrilling as ever, directed by Jerry Nobile. This was followed by several members of the community speaking on a variety of topics relating to service. Matt Hofele gave reflections of Dr. King, Harriet Downer spoke about providing for the community, David Hubbard spoke on remembering our veterans, Cameren Staley spoke on school service, Lyn James spoke about educating our children and Brenda Lopez spoke about community outreach.

A dance performance by the ESOTA Dance Company, directed by Kerri Edge closed the inspirational and uplifting program, then a benediction was given by Rev. Catherine Wiczorek, curate of St. John's of Lattingtown Episcopal Church, the everyone present sang We Shall Overcome.

Refreshments were provided and served by volunteers and local donors including The Bagel Café, AHRC, and Glen Cove Hospital.

Sheryl Goodine opened the program

Leading the well attended parade.

HOCHUL'S HOUSING DEBACLE

In her first State of the State address after winning a close election to Lee Zeldin, Governor Kathy Hochul called for building 800,000 units of high-density and low-income housing, to be spread across New York. Those 800,000 housing units represent some 3 million new people.

The first question is why New York needs so much housing, when people are fleeing from New York to move to Georgia and Florida. Upstate New York has lost 2 million people, and has a glut of housing - with basic houses available for as little as $30,000. The mindless incantation of "we need affordable housing" ignores the fact that New York has lots of affordable housing - in places like Upstate with a dead economy and no jobs.

It is a rule of economics that desirable places to live have expensive housing - because so many people (demand) are competing for a limited stock of housing (supply).

Hochul proposes to override local zoning, and force high-density housing into every community. That's a nasty political swipe - just her angry revenge - for places like Long Island voting against her this past November.

Local leaders, like Oyster Bay Supervisor Joe Saladino, and North Hempstead Supervisor Jen DeSena vow to oppose, sue, and delay Hochul's "abolish the suburbs" agenda.

The Leader supports them - and will be there fighting alongside against Hochul, to preserve our communities and our green space.

HOCHUL'S JUDICIAL DEBACLE

The heavily-stacked NYS Senate Judiciary Committee this week voted 10 to 9 to kill the nomination of Justice Hector LaSalle for Chief Judge of New York.

LaSalle - of Northport - is a mainstream Democrat who has followed a centrist jurisprudence. That fact marked LaSalle for obliteration by the Radical Left caucus, that increasingly controls the NYS Senate.

Hochul failed to lobby or corral her fellow Democrats, and never reached out to the Republicans, who still control 21 seats (out of 63) in the NYS Senate. Six of LaSalle's none "yes" votes came from Republicans, a fact not thanked nor appreciated by the arrogant Governor. Her incompetence has likely ended the career of a decent man who should be Chief Judge, and has resulted in her own humiliation.

The Radical Left is now moving to "take over" the NYS Judiciary.

It would be a near miracle for Hochul to now save the LaSalle nomination. Let's hope that Hochul at least tries.

MONTEREY PARK, EVANSVILLE SHOOTINGS, HERO BRANDON TSAY,

To the Editor:

We like good news but typically the news is not good. Too often no news is good news. In reality, no news is bad news for us all.

There is lots of recent bad news. A crazed gunman entered a dance hall in Monterey Park, California killing 10 people and wounding many innocent people. A former employee walked into an Evansville, Indiana Walmart and shot an employee in the face in the store breakroom. The shooter was killed by local police. A planned protest in downtown Atlanta turned violent when protestors damaged stores and burned a police car over the weekend.

We did hear astonishing good news from Monterey Park. Brandon Tsay confronted the gunman at a second location where he was about to enter and kill more people. He heroically wrestled the gun away from the killer and pointed it at him causing the gunman to leave the scene. Only God knows how many lives Tsay saved. He is a true hero.

News is always happening nationally, locally and individually to us all. We need the information whether it's good or bad. We need the national and regional news but the local news is up front and close to us.

For example, all around us we are targets of scams, thieves and prowling bad people. Americans were scammed to the tune 5.8 billion dollars in 2021. (Digital Guardian). We are never beyond being duped. Today, daily text messages, emails, phone calls and mail come to Americans phishing for a sucker who will buy the false story they are telling. They are good at what they do.

My son was away in a foreign country when I was duped out of $350 years ago. The caller was very professional sounding and convincing. I believed that if I did not pay the money owed by my son it would negatively impact his career. This was at the beginning of the telephone scam industry and I paid him the money. Later I realized that I had been scammed.

Years ago, a dear friend received a telephone call from someone posing as an IRS agent. The scammer told the senior adult man that he owed $45,000 in back taxes for various reasons. The friend was about 90 years old and living on a meager retirement income. He didn't realize he was being scammed, was overwhelmed with anxiety and killed himself.

"At every level of life there is a new devil," an old friend once said. At every stage of life there are new twists, turns and curves. We are never beyond being informed, learning and developing. Young people make mistakes but so do old people. We often think we've lived long enough and know most everything, but we don't. Most of us have become more aware of this problem but crooks work at catching people off guard and are constantly developing new schemes.

Today, we have search engines and are inundated with news and information. However, we don't hear all the news nor do we know everything we need to know when we need to know. Often, we learn the hard way. This is why education is expensive. Life experience education is often the most expensive and difficult of all learning processes. Even in life education we learn but we don't always utilize the life experience very much. Too often we repeat the same mistakes hoping for a different outcome.

We can't go wrong with good information. This is why you need the publication you are reading. Your local paper and online news sources are crucial to a community's health and overall well-being. Local newspapers, blogs and online sources tell what is happening in your local town and county. Support this news source with your subscription and advertising needs. County newspapers that have been around for years continue to close.

REV. DR. MLK JR. LEGACY OF SERVICE

By Victoria R. Crosby

What are you doing for others is a question often asked by many of our great leaders of the present and the past.

It is life's most persistent and urgent question, according to the Rev. Dr. King, and by offering a helping hand great blessings you will bring.

For this country to be a united nation there must be more participation, not just a small percentage of the population. Helping people everyday is the best way to fulfill the dreams of MLK.

We also remember Rev. Calvin Butts III (the third) who had the guts to preach the word to fight for civil rights through his ministry and improve the Harlem community.

You have to fight for freedom, as freedom isn't free. The marches and protests changed the way things used to be. "The appalling silence of the good people" was what Dr. King wrote. You have to fight for what is right with your words and with your vote.

You won't achieve cooperation if you grab them by the throat, but by being kind, and being thoughtful, not deceitful, cruel and awful.

Treat others as you would be treated so that the Golden Rule is never, ever defeated.

Saladino, DeSena Denounce Hochul's High-Density Housing

BY RUPERT DEEDES

Governor Kathy Hochul's demand for high-density low-income housing in single-family neighborhoods on Long Island was met with a fierce and united opposition from leaders and residents on the north shore.

Town of North Hempstead Supervisor Jennifer DeSena, Town of Oyster Bay Supervisor Joseph Saladino and City of Glen Cove Mayor Pamela Panzenbeck all denounced Hochul's plan as an "attack on the suburbs."

Hochul announced her plan in the recent State of the State address, demanding that 800,000 new high-density, low-income housing units - for 2.5 million people - be built in the next three years.

Hochul would force Long Island communities to build large-scale development projects aiming to reach a targeted housing growth of 3 percent over three years.

Hochul demanded that high-density projects be approved by a newly created "Fast Track Approval" program, which would kick in if a municipality does not build 3 percent more high density housing.

Critics of the governor's plan note that the program is available only for multi-family projects, and that it exists in order to override the authority of local zoning law.

Under the proposal, Nassau County, which is home to more than 478,000 housing units, would be required to add an estimated 14,340 additional housing units, housing 60,000 new residents. The Fast Track Approval program would deny municipalities the ability to deny unwanted low income housing developments.

Nassau County leaders say that an influx of 14,340 additional housing units in Nassau County - which is already one of the most densely populated counties in the country - would increase traffic congestion and the number of cars parked on the streets, strain emergency services, increase the number of children in schools, increase pressure on local infrastructure, and threaten the environment.

Hochul also outlined a plan for rezoning of areas within a half-mile radius of the 58 LIRR stations. This plan would "up-zone" neighborhoods to increase population density and allow for large apartment buildings to be developed.

"Removing the rights of residents to have a say over the future of our communities is a direct threat to democracy," stated Oyster Bay Supervisor Saladino.

"The future of our suburban communities is at stake," added North Hempstead Supervisor DeSena. "We need local control, not Hochul control,"

Remembering the Life of Slave-Poet Jupiter Hammon

Jupiter Hammon

BY CHRIS O'NEILL

"Our forefathers came from Africa tos't over the raging main to a Christian shore there to stay and not return again.

"Dark and dismal was the Day
When slavery began.

All humble thoughts were put away
Then slaves were made by Man."
From An Essay on Slavery (1786)

These were the words of Jupiter Hammon, the first Black poet to be published in America. Hammon was born in 1711 as a slave to Henry Lloyd, of Lloyd Manor in present day Lloyd Harbor.

The Lloyd family encouraged Hammon to attend school to learn to read and write. He became a bookkeeper and helped run the family business.

His first poem was published in 1760. Heavily influenced by the Great Awakening religious revival, Hammon was an evangelist at heart and criticized the institution of slavery from a biblical perspective.

The Lloyd family were patriots and had to flee Long Island to Connecticut during the American Revolution.

The irony of the Revolution was not lost on Hammon and he wrote:

Liberty is a great thing we may know from our own feelings, and we may likewise Judge so from the conduct of the white-people, in the late war. How much money has been spent, and how many lives have been lost, to defend their liberty. I must say that I have hoped that God would open their eyes, when they were so much engaged for liberty, to think of the state of the poor blacks, and to pity us. (from: An Address to the Negroes in the State of New-York (1787)).

Hammon was also aware of the economic difficulties facing manumitted slaves and wrote that "I should be glad, if others, especially the young negroes were to be free.."

Hammon died around 1806 and was likely buried on the Lloyd estate. It is unclear whether he died still a slave or as a free man.

Op-Ed: Two Opposite Takes On the Issue of Climate Change

BY STEVE LEVY

Compare the two opposite takes on the issue of climate change:

One approach is by former Secretary of State John Kerry, who speaks in messianic tones as to how he and other super-wealthy elites who gather each year at the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland will battle climate change.

Kerry is virtue signaling to his fellow privileged ideologues how they alone have been called upon to save the Planet.

He calls upon the poor and middle classes to change their behavior to avoid Armageddon.

At the same time, he and the billionaires attending this conference will go on flying in their private jets and having cooks prepare their meals on gas stoves.

Compare this pie-in-the-sky attitude to the more brutal but realistic approach explained brilliantly by Konstantin Kisin at Oxford University.

Kisin echoes many of the writings in this column that have noted how over a billion people have been lifted out of poverty worldwide in the last three decades due to development and industrialization.

Poor people in the third world worrying if their children will die of starvation or disease are not concerned about a .5 degree change in temperature over the next 100 years.

Their primary only concern is getting an energy source they can afford to prevent immediate malnutrition, illness, or even death.

As Kisin explained, the United Kingdom contributes only 2% to the world's carbon footprint.

If England sank to the bottom of the sea, it would not make a dent in the climate, due to rapidly expanding carbon footprint emissions from China, India, Indonesia, and other growing economies that go on unabated.

That is why the answer to climate change must be new technological innovations, not shutting down the world economy.

Universal Pre-K Opens in Locust Valley and Bayville

Stephanie Butera’s pre-K class at Ann MacArthur Primary gather for their first story time.

The Locust Valley Central School District welcomed pre-kindergarten students into Ann MacArthur Primary School and Bayville Primary school on Jan. 9, as the district opened the doors to its new full day universal pre-K program.

Upon arrival on the first day at Ann MacArthur, students and their families were greeted with balloons from the Locust Valley Elementary Parents Council and the smiling faces of staff members. Similarly, at Bayville Primary School, Mrs. Miraglia waved pink pom poms and greeted arriving students as they entered the school for the first time.

“The first day was absolutely spectacular,” Ann MacArthur Principal Kurt Simon said. “We’re so excited to see these new students walk through the doors for the first time. It far exceeded our expectations.”

The program was designed to provide students with play-based, developmentally appropriate learning activities aligned with the Next Generation Early Learning Standards to prepare them for kindergarten. Their days will include calendar activities, center time (dramatic play, blocks and building, creative arts, sensory science and discovery, writing and math), circle time, quiet time, lunch time, small group time, free play time, snack time, and art, music, physical education and library experiences.

Bayville's New Night Spot

The How at the Bayville Community Center.

By VICTORIA SIEGEL

The Bayville Village Arts Council (BVAC) has put together an exciting schedule of musical events that ranges from rock and blues to opera and Broadway tunes. The Community Center, 88 Bayville Avenue, is transformed into an Arts Center for Visual and Musical Arts now provides a nightclub vibe for the audiences. There are also plans for an open mic nights (next 4-8-23) and jam nights and karaoke nights.

The 2023 schedule of musical events kicked off on Saturday night January 7th when several dozen villagers were treated to a classic rock performance by the HOW with Mike Carrozza on drums and Walter Campos, Mike Sardo and John Venegas on Guitars. The HOW has been playing their favorite rock, country and blues covers since 2019 for audiences around Long Island at venues, festivals, and private events. They create an atmosphere appealing to most music lovers. Tonight's performance features some legendary tunes made famous in the 1970's. They will return to the Music Center at least on Feb. 4, Mar. 4, April 8, 2023.

The audience was accustomed to hearing the group perform at the beaches and brewery in Bayville and now, performing indoors and close up, the band created a real club atmosphere. Not to be restrained, audience members rose to their feet and danced to several classic tunes and were heard singing along the familiar lyrics to classics by CCR and Stones and Alabama. It could truly be said that a good time was had by all: band and audience.
